Entered at the Postoffice at Barre as Second Class Matter.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 15, 1906.

The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in the section.

4,150

The life of the umpire is short in the Northern league.

The pace at which Barre's postoffice building is being projected gives us plenty of time to contemplate the changes.

Waterbury is the latest Vermont community to receive the bequest of a library, through the generosity of the late Mrs. Horace Fales. The state is becoming well dotted with these institutions, largely the gifts of natives of the places.

Things are pretty well equalized, as wages and food are both declared to be higher.

It is noticeable that nearly all the insurance companies that are now withholding on payment of San Francisco losses are located in foreign countries. The concerns in the United States hope for continued patronage.

If every gun in Vermont should be licensed, as Commissioner Thomas of the game commission urges, there would be a great revenue to the state, for he states that during the year 1905 alone 500 new sporting guns were purchased in Vermont.

The following little incident in the Dedham, Mass., court this week may be interesting to Barre people just at present:

"I had been traveling at an average of only twelve or thirteen miles an hour for the day, but might have been going twenty or twenty-five miles an hour when stopped. I have never been charged with speeding before. My machine was a heavy one. I had no speedometer, and I saw no sign warning automobilists against speeding. I ask the court to place the case on file or impose a small fine."

Judge Plympton inquired: "You had proper brakes?"

To which Mr. Foster answered that he had, but that the machine was working poorly.

The judge imposed a fine of $15, saying: "I should expect to pay a fine if I was charged with speeding, and should expect no distinction to be made for the bar."

The Republicans of Montpelier have nominated a bright, enterprising young man for city representative. John N. Harvey has had considerable experience in legislative affairs and if elected would enter upon the duties of the office as well equipped with practical knowledge of affairs as anyone in Montpelier.

POPULATION GAINS IN VERMONT.

The United States census bureau credits the state of Vermont with an actual gain in population since the regular census of 1900, according to a special report on mortality figures which has just been published. The estimated population of the state in 1904 is given at 348,120, or an increase in the four years of 4,488. At the same ratio of increase the population must now be slightly over 350,000. This should be encouraging news, especially in view of the fact that from 1890 to 1900 the population of the state decreased something like 10,000. It is probable that the greater portion of the increase at the present time, if analyzed, would show that the large towns of the state are responsible for the satisfactory showing. For instance, Burlington, credited with 18,640 inhabitants in the previous census, was allowed 20,260 by the 1904 estimate, while statisticians in the Queen City now place the figures several thousand above that mark. A greater gain is credited by the census office to Barre than to her larger sister, and the total for 1904 is placed at 10,168, or an annual increase of 430. At the same rate Barre should now have a trifle over 11,000 population. It is probable, too, that the percentage of gain is placed at a very conservative figure.

This Week's National Song.
 The weather field will make life dim,
 But when far hence he's whirled
 It will be hot enough for him
 In quite another world!

A Lecture on Finance.
 Now, money's most mysterious stuff;
 You can't say where it's at.
 For if you haven't quite enough
 For sorrow you are slated.
 If you've too much, again it's tough—
 You got investigated.
